

PLEASANT HELL

You'll laugh. You'll cry. You'll feel angry, ecstatic, scared, sad. enlightened. You will feel the disturbingly-awesome, terrible glory of. life. There is nothing more fascinating than a desperate, yearning, misanthropic. humanist. For when he's done with you in the purgatory of Pleasant Hell you'll feel braver, wiser more alive and cleaner than you've ever been. None of which, of course, he intended.

Reader's Opinions

(10/10) John Dolan has been in the trenches of loneliness. He (or at least his narrator in this thinly disguised memoir) knows the things familiar to anyone who's been lonely for a long time -- the way you start to think of yourself as a multitude, the careful lengths taken to avoid social contact, the obsession over the little social...
